

Valet Charlie dressed in leather

Pepe Andreu and Sol&luna: The fusion of design and craftsmanship

October 21.- Friendship and mutual admiration for contemporary craftsmanship and design resulted in a collaboration between designer Pepe Andreu and Carolina Sánchez de Movellán of Sol&luna.

The renowned furniture designer and creator Pepe Andreu and the Sol&Luna brand, known for its luxury craftsmanship in the creation and manufacture of leather pieces, have decided to carry out a special collaboration.

Combining professionalism and know-how in handcrafted manufacturing, they have created, in a limited/exclusive edition, the well-known Charlie night stand designed by Pepe Andreu but, this time, totally covered in leather by Sol&luna's craftsmen.

The result... fascinating. Originally manufactured using two types of wood with a simple and attractive silhouette, the Galán Charlie has been transformed by Sol&Luna into a piece of design linked to the "Art of Leather". Sol&Luna's meticulous craftsmanship with top quality leather has turned it into a warm and avant-garde object.

"Few pieces of furniture are as chameleon-like the Valet Charlie. The goal in designing the ValetCharlie was to make it aesthetically appealing, both with and without clothes. It had to be a piece of furniture with a strong presence and character, but also be discreet and not take up too much space. The result has been to leave only the essentials of the traditional valet and turn the Valet Charlie into an object and a piece of furniture," says Pepe Andreu.

The work that Sol&Luna has done in this collaboration fits perfectly with Pepe Andreu's defense of craftsmanship and the level of demand that he has in this type of collaborations. Likewise, both recognize that the final result has far exceeded all their expectations.
